81, RUE DE L'UNIVERSITÉ, PARIS

Paris, 1949

Where it all began: a lunch in Rouen, a cooking class full of men in white, and a mountain of onions.

Julia's table — IN OLD FRANCS

Sole meunière — 70 fr
Whole sole dusted in flour, browned in butter, lemon, parsley.
Rouen, the first lunch. Paul ordered.

Gougères — 30 fr
Warm Gruyère choux puffs, a grating of nutmeg.
Practice for the cooking school.

Reine de Saba — 40 fr
Chocolate almond cake, soft middle, dark chocolate glaze.
The Queen of Sheba. A cake from the book.

L'École des Trois Gourmandes.
Bon appétit!

BEURRE DOUX
Butter
You can never have too much.

A DINNER FROM THE BOOK

Julie & Julia

Paris, 1949 and Queens, 2002

Julia at the fish market. The sole, 70 francs the kilo.

365 days. 524 recipes.
One tiny kitchen in Queens.

LONG ISLAND CITY, QUEENS, N.Y.

Queens, 2002

Our kitchen table, and the Queen of Sheba, going fast.

Everything tonight comes out of Julia's book, cooked in a kitchen the size of a closet. The beef is attempt two. I fell asleep on attempt one.

Julie

COMMENTS (17)

Did the lobsters make it? I check this blog before my email.

posted by a reader, 11:42 P.M.

DAY

1

of 365

524 recipes

AT JULIE'S, ABOVE THE PIZZA PLACE

The Dinner

To start

PRICED AT COST

Kir $3.65

Dry white Burgundy poured over crème de cassis, a blackberry.

Julie's bruschetta $5.24

Toasted ciabatta rubbed with garlic, ripe tomato, basil, olive oil.

The main event

Lobster, melted butter $26.00

Two live lobsters, boiled, lemon and drawn butter.

Bought live. There was screaming.

Boeuf bourguignon $31.50

Beef braised in red wine, bacon, carrots, onions, mushrooms.

Attempt number two. Nobody fell asleep.

Pâté de canard en croûte $20.02

Whole duck, boned, stuffed with pork and veal, in pastry.

Boned by hand. It took a while.

Prices are the grocery bill. No Cobb salad.