81, RUE DE L'UNIVERSITÉ, PARIS

Paris, 1949

Where it all began: a lunch in Rouen, a cooking class full of men in white, and a mountain of onions.

Julia at the fish market. The sole, 70 francs the kilo.

Julia's table — IN OLD FRANCS

Sole meunière — 70 fr

Whole sole dusted in flour, browned in butter, lemon, parsley.

Rouen, the first lunch. Paul ordered.

Soupe à l'oignon — 45 fr

Onions cooked slow, beef broth, toast, melted cheese.

A mountain of onions, chopped by hand.

Gougères — 30 fr

Warm Gruyère choux puffs, a grating of nutmeg.

A DINNER FROM THE BOOK

Julie & Julia

Paris, 1949 and Queens, 2002

The Left Bank, painted in 1949, the year Julia went to cooking school.

365 days. 524 recipes.

One tiny kitchen in Queens. Bon appétit!

L'École des Trois Gourmandes. Watercolor, V. A. Lundy.

LONG ISLAND CITY, QUEENS, N.Y.

Queens, 2002

Our kitchen table, and the Queen of Sheba, going fast.

Welcome, everybody. Everything tonight comes out of Julia's book, cooked in a kitchen the size of a closet. The beef is attempt number two. I fell asleep on attempt one. Please do not look in the trash.

Julie

COMMENTS (17)

Did the lobsters make it? I check this blog before I check my email.

posted by a reader, 11:42 P.M.

DAY

1

of 365

524 recipes

AT JULIE'S, ABOVE THE PIZZA PLACE

The Dinner

To start

PRICED AT COST

Kir $3.65

Dry white Burgundy poured over crème de cassis, a blackberry.

Julie's bruschetta $5.24

Toasted ciabatta rubbed with garlic, ripe tomato, basil, olive oil.

The main event

Lobster, melted butter $26.00

Two live lobsters, boiled, lemon and drawn butter.

Bought live. There was screaming.

Boeuf bourguignon $31.50

Beef in red Burgundy, bacon, carrots, pearl onions, mushrooms.

Attempt number two. Nobody fell asleep.

Pâté de canard en croûte $20.02

Whole duck, boned, stuffed with pork and veal, in pastry.

Boned by hand. It took a while.

Reine de Saba $8.15

Chocolate almond cake, soft middle, dark chocolate glaze.

Prices are the grocery bill. No Cobb salad.